Villegas: from council to county

Governor Brown picks West Sacramento native to fill empty seat on Yolo Board of Supervisors

OSCAR VILLEGAS:

Brown to replace
Michael McGowan as Yolo Supervisor

The office of Governor Jerry Brown announced Friday that he has appointed Oscar E. Villegas to fill the remaining term as the District 1 representative to the Yolo County Board of Supervisors.

That board seat was vacated in December by longtime supervisor Michael McGowan, after McGowan accepted the governor's appointment to a special position in the Department of Motor Vehicles.

Villegas, 47, has been on the West Sacramento City Council since 2000. He has been a field representative for the California Board of State and Community Corrections since 2008.

Among other applicants for the vacancy on the Board of Supervisors was fellow city council member Bill Kristoff, who has served on the council since its inception in 1987.

Villegas told the News-

Ledger he hasn't heard yet when he will begin service on the board. When he sworn in, he will vacate his current city council seat (its term ends in 2016 and the council has yet to take up a discussion of how to fill the remaining part of the term). "For me, I really feel like it's the perfect fit," Villegas said of the seat on the county board of supervisors. "My experience growing up in West Sacramento, my work on the planning commission and city council, and my professional day job working with probation agencies, social service agencies and other agencies all made it look like this

Inspired after hearing about a project in which volunteers made scarves, in silence, for charity, the Interact Club at River City High School decided to do something similar.

Students in the club started "Blankets of Love," joining in silent meditation or prayer while cutting and double-knotting pieces of fleece into blankets to give to those in need.

They were taught the blanket-making technique by Patty Gianatasio.

The student club is sponsored by the city's two Rotary chapters and advised by local chiropractor Charyl Silva.

Wrong-way driver dies on West Sac freeway

The Yolo County Coroner's office has identified the woman killed in an early-morning freeway accident Thursday in West Sacramento.

She was Cassandra Caruthers, a 28-year old from Sacramento.

Caruthers was driving the wrong way on I-80 in West Sacramento at about 2:17 a.m. when she struck another vehicle head-on, reports the coroner's office.

The other driver experienced minor injuries.

Other aspects of the accident are still ongoing.

POLICE LOG

News items below are collected from police dispatchers' notes and arrest reports. The information in them has often not been verified beyond the initial reports.

Feb. 4, 11:30 a.m.

A police officer responded to a case of vandalism involving a credit union ATM on Harbor Boulevard. Reviewing a surveillance video, he reported that a pair of suspects had tried to blow up the cash dispenser.

"Suspects used some kind of explosive device in an attempt to gain access to the ATM," he wrote.

A 36-year old Maple Street woman and her boyfriend were identified and contacted. It wasn't clear if there was another suspect as well.

The woman was seen on video "manipulating this ATM for approximately two minutes before the second male suspect placed an incendiary/explosive device on this ATM. Seconds later, the device ignites."

The explosion rendered the ATM inoperable.

The woman told police she went to the ATM to get cash with her ATM card. She could show no card, nor a receipt for a cash withdrawal.

Feb. 4, 1:30 p.m.

Someone wrote fake checks using account information from a business on South River Road. The checks were then cashed against the business's account.

Feb. 5, 2:30 p.m.

A male suspect stole a power tool from a home center on Riverpoint Court on Feb. 2 and another on Feb. 5 (one time it was a framing nailer, the other time a cordless drill). The incidents were caught on surveillance video.

A police officer spotted the suspect, a 23-year old from Dobros Court, on bike nearby shortly after the second theft. The man was arrested. A family member gave permission for police to search the man's house, and the tools were found.

Feb. 5, 5:14 p.m.

Police conducted a probation search at a Maple Street apartment. Found in the common area of the unit was a woman's wallet with ID and

'True love, the kind that never ends'

With another Valentine's Day right around the corner, a longtime West Sacramento friend of mine suggested it might be a good topic for a column.

"But that means I'd have to talk about love and all that mushy stuff," I said, as the palms of my hands began to perspire.

"You men are all alike," she said, slowly shaking her head from side to side. "Most of you don't even know the meaning of the word."

"Actually," I said, "I've written other Valentine's Day columns before."

"Well, they must not have been too memorable because I've been reading the News-Ledger longer than you've been working there and I don't remember you writing anything about Valentine's Day. What were they about?"

"Well, one of them was just a collection of some old quotes by famous men who claimed to know something about love, and some of them were pretty witty and profound."

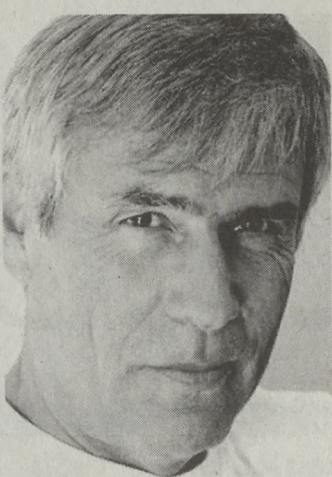

"Like what?"

"Well, one of them I remember was by S.J. Perelman, and he said that 'Love is not the dying moan of a distant violin, but rather the triumphant twang of a bed-spring.'"

"And you think that is a profound insight into love?"

"Well, kind of, in its own small way of course."

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

"Any others?"

"Let's see. Oh, Sir Walter Scott said 'Love can withstand very severe storms of vigor, but not the long polar frost of indifference', which I think is very true."

"But you're missing the whole point, Daryl! A Valentine's Day column should be about true love, the kind that never ends, the stuff that dreams are made of and that we end up taking to our grave. So here's what you do if you actually want to write a memorable Valentine's Day column. You go pick yourself up a book of Elizabeth Barrett Browning's poems and when you see the words, 'How do I love thee, let me count the ways', start reading."

"Anything else?"

"Yeah, get a copy of Shakespeare's 116th sonnet, too, which is probably the best love poem ever written, and read it at least a half-dozen times because there's layers of great insights in it."

"Is that all?" I asked as she turned to leave.

"Yes, and put both of them word-for-word somewhere in your column on Valentine's Day."

"But my readers will think I'm nuts if I put a couple of long classic love poems in the News-Ledger."

Without even looking back, she yelled, "All ten of them already think you're nuts!"

Sonnets from the Portuguese #43: "How do I love thee? Let me count the ways" By Elizabeth Barrett Browning

"How do I love thee? Let me count the ways.

I love thee to the depth and breadth and height

My soul can reach, when feeling out of sight

For the ends of Being and ideal Grace

I love thee to the level of every day's

Most quiet need, by sun and candlelight.

I love thee freely, as men strive for Right.

I love thee purely, as they turn from Praise.

I love thee with the passion put to use

In old griefs, and with my childhood's faith.

I love thee with a love I seemed to lose

With my lost saints - I love thee with the Breath, smiles, tears, of all my life!

And, if God choose,

I shall but love thee better after death."

"Sir Walter Scott said, 'Love can withstand very severe storms of vigor, but not the long polar frost of indifference,' which I think is very true," said my friend.

Sonnet #116
By William Shakespeare

"Let me not to the marriage of true minds
Admit impediments. Love is not love
Which alters when it alternation finds,
Or bends with the remover to remove
Oh, no! It is an ever-fixed mark

That looks on tempests and is never shaken;

It is the star to every wandering bark,
Whose worth's unknown, although his height

Be taken.

Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks

With his bending sickle's compass come;
Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,

But bears it out even to the edge of doom.
If this be error and upon me proved
I never writ, nor no man ever loved."

The $1.7 million grant over four years is monitored by the Mental Health Services Oversight and Accountability Commission and will fund crisis triage personnel.

The Yolo County Department of Alcohol, Drug & Mental Health proposes to fund crisis personnel, including clinicians and peer counselors. Yolo County plans to assign clinical staff to accompany law enforcement on crisis calls and peer counselors to provide support following a crisis, including assistance engaging in a crisis plan, navigating the system of services and supporting recovery needs.

role was the perfect fit."

Villegas's "day job" is with California's Board of State and Community Corrections.

"We administer state and federal grants to local municipalities and nonprofit organizations to help those who are going to be released or who are at the risk of being incarcerated," he said. The grants are intended to help steer people away from a life of crime or give them a "soft landing" back into society when they come out of jail or prison.

Villegas said he will switch to part-time work for the state when he takes the full-time position as county supervisor.

Does he view the county and its government as something that needs "fixing?"

"If you'd asked me that ten years ago, I would have said there were major issues," Villegas answered. "But Mike McGowan has paved the way for a wonderful relationship between the city and county, and it's up to me to maintain the relationship."

Following the recession, he said, "the county is emerging in good shape, and the city is as well."

He said he hopes to become involved in public safety issues within Yolo County, and also to help the county follow the West Sacramento city council's disciplined practice of pursuing strategic goals. He called that "focused leadership."

"We've been very fortunate in West Sacramento to have this focused leadership," he remarked. "I can bring my experience with me. . . We say, 'here's where we need to go, and how do we ensure staff has the resources to get it done? How do we stay out of the way and not micromanage?'"

Villegas will fill the remainder of McGowan's term, which is scheduled to end in December. The seat is up for election in the June primary, and Villegas intends to run for reelection.

Does he have higher political ambitions?

"Right now, I just want to focus on the task at hand," he answered. "I don't have the ambitions at this time for something else."

Villegas's appointment drew praise from other local leaders. The Sacramento Bee quoted Mayor Christopher Cabaldon as predicting he will be a

Oscar Villegas on his experience on the City Council:

"I can bring my experience with me. We say, 'here's where we need to go, and how do we ensure staff has the resources to get it done? How do we stay out of the way?'"

"terrific asset" to the board, and said Supervisor Matt Rexroad called Villegas a "first round draft choice."

State Senator Lois Wolk, in a press release, said she could think of "nobody better suited than Oscar Villegas" to replace McGowan on the Yolo board:

"He is a homegrown leader who cares deeply about his community and has the skills and good working relationships in the region that will enable him to come to the Board of Supervisors and immediately get to work," added Wolk.

Villegas's wife, Katie, is on the local school board and serves as executive director of the Yolo County Children's Alliance, a nonprofit organization.

The county supervisor position pays $59,004 annually, reports the governor's office. District 1 serves Clarksburg and most of West Sacramento — excluding a slice of the "Bryte" neighborhood in the city's northwest.

Villegas is a Southport resident who grew up in the city's north. Like Governor Brown and former supervisor McGowan, Villegas is a Democrat.

Feb. 5, 5:56 p.m.

An officer pulled over a Ford pickup truck at Bryte Avenue and Anna Street. A 27-year old male passenger was found to have a felony warrant, and was on probation. The man was arrested and searched.

A small bag with a "small amount of dark brown tar-like substance consistent with tar heroin" was found under the passenger seat. The man told police the drugs were his and the driver "had nothing to do with it." He went to jail.

Feb. 5, 8:18 p.m.

Police were dispatched to the 1000-block of West Capitol Avenue where a man was reportedly looking into mailboxes.

An officer spotted a 23-year old homeless man a block away, appearing "agitated" and "rambling incoherently. The man had one hand in his jacket and the other in his pants. He was ordered to take his hands out of his pockets, and didn't comply.

When two officers were on scene, "for our safety we attempted to remove them in a controlled manner," reported one. The man resisted and there was a struggle. The man was Tasered five times before he was finally handcuffed.

A search turned up a glass pipe in the man's jacket. Three baggies with suspected drugs were found on the ground and on the bumper of the patrol car where the man had been sitting during part of the contact. The man was medically cleared, then booked into jail.

Feb. 7, 7:28 p.m.

A patrol officer saw a man "pushing a bathtub northbound on 5th Street in the roadway."

Conducting a pedestrian/bathtub stop, the officer found the man to be on searchable probation. He was found with a syringe "loaded" with 54 cc of clear liquid that later tested positive as methamphetamine. The suspect, a 4th Street man, went to jail.

Feb. 7, 8:30 p.m.

A woman on San Nicolaus Road reported that someone had taken a handgun from the safe in her bedroom. The weapon, a 9 mm Sig Sauer, was worth around $900.

Feb. 8, 5:02 a.m.

A man was reported screaming on Glide Avenue. A responding officer asked the now-crying 30-year old from Sacramento to sit in the patrol car out of the rain. But when another officer walked up, the subject "aggressively approached" the new officer. The first officer grabbed the arm of the suspect, reported at about 6' 4" tall and 200 pounds.

The subject then "turned toward me, picked me up and held both my arms down," reported the first officer. He said he then managed to push the subject's face away, and was dropped to the ground.

Police ordered the man to the ground — repeatedly.

The subject "would comply with my directions, then suddenly start to get up, and I deployed my Taser against him approximately six to eight times," the officer reported. Eventually, he was controlled by several officers, handcuffed, taken to a hospital for clearance, and then to jail.

well for leading a book-club discussion.

"Hands Free Mama's" main message is to provide ways to encourage us to be more present for meaningful moments in our lives, which Stafford calls "sunset moments." Although the book's title references parenting, the non-parent will find plenty of ways to use the book's tools to connect with the loved ones in their life, whether they are children or not.

If you want to find a way to balance technology with "what really matters" in life, this is your read.

PICKS OF THE WEEK

"Gravity" (PG-13) -- Spiraling off into the dark void of space, two astronauts undergo a pulse-pounding struggle for survival as their odds of ever reaching Earth again plummet with each new obstacle. Sandra Bullock plays a medical officer on her first trip into outer space who is paired with a veteran astronaut, played by George Clooney. While working on the Hubble telescope, a patch of space debris cuts them off from the space shuttle and sends the pair careening into space.

During its box-office run, "Gravity" attracted rave reviews from audiences and critics. Cinema purists have hailed it as a model for how 3-D filmmaking should be done. For us home-video audiences, the movie offers a tenacious survival drama that will leave you gasping for sweet, sweet oxygen.

"Thor: The Dark World" (PG-13) -- Long ago, the Norse gods of Asgard banished some ancient evil dudes to a far-off dimension. Natalie Portman, while searching for a way to contact Thor, accidentally unleashes the sealed-away evil powers. Once again, the fate of the universe is in the brawny hands of Thor the thunder god (Chris Hemsworth). This time, however, Thor needs to recruit the reluctant aid of his evil brother, Loki (Tom Hiddleston), the god of chaos and the villain of "The Avengers."

Scene from 'Gravity'

While Hemsworth carried the first Thor film on his broad shoulders, this sequel is largely propped up by the caustic and sneering screen presence of Hiddleston. As Thor's adopted brother and chief rival, he's also the balancing point for the movie that allows it to make fun of itself. Audiences get to drink in the foamy, hammer-smashy battles, then wash it down with the refreshingly sour lemonade of Loki's anti-hero.

"Nebraska" (R) -- A bitter old man and his disillusioned son take an eye-opening road trip from Missouri to Nebraska in this black-and-white dark comedy. Bruce Dern plays Woody Grant, a crusty Midwestern alcoholic who believes he's won a magazine sweepstakes. His son, Dave ("SNL's" Will Forte), agrees to take him on the road. The film gives a lot of consideration to the landscapes surrounding the minuscule drama; lots of wide open, underwhelming backdrops underscore the brief exchanges of dialogue and quiet realizations of missed opportunities.

"Blue Is the Warmest Color" (R) -- The story starts with 15-year-old Adele (Adele Exarchopoulos), a French high-school student who has caught the eye of one of her male classmates. While Adele's first romance fizzles, she becomes fixated on Emma, a mysterious blue-haired art student she's seen around town. The story of romance, pain and discovery unfolds over decades, taking the viewer on an emotional ride into deepest parts of the human heart. The film has garnered a lot of controversy for its scenes of adult intimacy, but the backlash shouldn't take away from this beautiful drama.

If you find yourself drowning in the everyday digital distractions of modern life, author Rachael Macy Stafford offers a lifeline with her new book, "Hands Free Mama." Without having to resign yourself to a life with no computer, phone or Internet, Stafford offers simple ways to still use technology without feeling ruled by it.

Divided into chapters like "Make Purposeful Connection," "Choose What Matters" and "Take Pause," the book combines personal stories from the author's parenting journey -- the triumphs and the mistakes -- with her blog readers' own tales of living life hands-free. There also are plenty of practical tips (for example, changing your computer or phone home screen to a picture that will remind you to re-evaluate if you need to be constantly checking the device) and catchy mantras woven into each chapter. These are supplemented with reflection questions that the reader can use as a guide to ponder how to manage technology challenges. The questions also would work

Good Mood Food

The cold and gloom of winter often bring with them a change in mood that matches the climate. Need a boost? According to new research, some foods have the same effect on your body as taking a prescription mood-enhancing drug.

Do you reach for food or caffeine during the day in an attempt to feel calm, find a jolt of energy or a moment of bliss? But above all else, do you just really crave a better mood?

While good habits such as eating breakfast every morning and regular meals and snacks throughout the day form the cornerstone of an energized outlook, science is revealing the vital ways in which food impacts our mood. And it might surprise you that some of the best weapons to help cure crankiness and boost energy can be found in your local grocery store.

The following foods will help your mood in two ways. First, they deliver some key nutrients that help support brain chemistry to reduce the risk of depression and help improve the quality of your sleep. And they do something equally important: Powerful combinations of vitamins, minerals and antioxidants help you build up your energy and capacity to handle life from your body's deepest levels (your cell's metabolic and energy pathways). This is what we all should aim for, not the quick burst of stimulation from a sugar or caffeine fix that ultimately leaves you feeling cranky or tired.

Make these feel-good foods a part of a new happiness and health routine.

Dark Chocolate
Not only is it delicious, dark chocolate is high in magnesium, a mineral that calms your muscles and reduces anxiety. It also contains tryptophan, which helps reduce symptoms of depression.

Salmon and Walnuts
Salmon and walnuts are packed with omega-3s, which help fight off depression and mood swings. Bonus: They also can help improve memory and focus.

Spinach
This leafy green is stocked with folic acid, a B vitamin that has been found to boost your mood. It's also an antioxidant that works to protect your brain cells from free radicals, which can lead to low energy and mood swings.

Chicken?

The white meat contains B-12, a vitamin that helps to keep you calm. Low B-12 levels can make you moody and tired.

Tofu

Tofu helps muscles relax, causing a calming effect on your body.

Avocado

Contains serotonin, a feel-good neurotransmitter. It's also really good for your skin, hair and nails.

Greek Yogurt

Not only is it a wonder-food, the probiotics in Greek yogurt help boost your mood and immune system.

Green Tea?

It's full of theanine, an antioxidant that acts as a calming agent.

Berries

Blueberries, strawberries and raspberries contain anthocyanidins and anthocyanins -- nutrients that help reduce stress and depression.

Chia and Flax Seeds

They have about the same amount of protein per ounce, at 4.4 grams and 5.1 grams respectively. However, chia is one of just a few plant sources that is a complete protein, meaning that it contains all of the needed protein-forming amino acids. Both of these seeds are a great way to get more fiber in your diet, but chia has the edge: an ounce gives you 10.6 grams of fiber, or 42 percent of your recommended daily intake, versus 7.6 grams and 31 percent for flax.

These seeds also provide different types of fiber. Chia is one of the richest sources of soluble fiber, the kind that takes longer to get through your digestive tract, which adds bulk and slows glucose absorption. The fiber in flax has been tied to lower LDL (bad) cholesterol. In fact, research has shown an association between daily flax consumption and lower cholesterol.

GOOD MOOD SALAD

Serve a tall glass of green tea along with this mood-enhancing salad, and follow with 2 ounces of dark chocolate as a sweet finish to lift your mood and nourish your body and your mind!

8 ounces smoked salmon, roughly chopped or 8 ounces of cooked chicken breast, roughly chopped
1 avocado, peeled, pitted and diced
4 cups baby spinach
1/2 cup fresh blueberries
1/4 cup light feta or blue cheese crumbles
1/4 cup toasted, chopped walnuts
Half a medium red onion, thinly sliced

Toss all ingredients together until combined. Drizzle or toss with Greek Yogurt Dressing (recipe follows). Makes 2 servings.

Greek Yogurt Dressing

1/2 cup Greek yogurt
4 ounces of soft, silken tofu
2 tablespoons apple cider vinegar
1 tablespoon chia or flax seeds
1 tablespoon honey
2 teaspoons stone-ground or grainy mustard
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon black pepper

Using a blender or a whisk, stir together all ingredients until combined and emulsified. This dressing will keep in an airtight container in the refrigerator for 7 days.

Four Yolo women picked for honors

The Yolo County Women's History Month Committee has announced the names of four Yolo County leaders who will be honored at the 2014 Women's History Month luncheon.

To be recognized for reflecting the 2014 national Women's History Month theme, 'Celebrating Women of Character, Courage, and Commitment,' are: Cecilia Aguiar-Curry, mayor of Winters and principal in a management consulting firm; Paula Lorenzo-Tackett, Capay Valley restaurateur and former chairperson of the Yocha Dehe Wintun Nation; Ann Foley Scheuring of Rumsey, long-time community volunteer and author of scholarly works on California agriculture and UC Davis history; and Nikki Shannon Smith of Woodland, children's book author and principal of Patwin Elementary School in Davis.

These four women were selected from more than a dozen nominations submitted by individuals and community groups from throughout the county.

This year's Yolo County Women's History Month luncheon will be held on Thursday, March 6, 11:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m., at the Woodland Community & Senior Center, 2001 East Street, Woodland. Reservations for the luncheon are now available for $25 per person. Sponsorships are available at the $75, $125, $250, and $500 lev-

Each year, March is designated nationally as Women's History Month to ensure that the accomplishments of women will be recognized and celebrated in schools, workplaces, and communities throughout the country.

Your internet needs

From Beth Gabor
County of Yolo

As part of a countywide strategic planning initiative to formulate a long term sustainable broadband plan, the Yolo Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCo) is seeking feedback from Yolo County businesses and residents concerning their broadband needs and services via a survey posted on www.yolocounty.org.

The goals of this study are to determine what Internet service is currently available and where there are gaps, to identify related community goals and ultimately, to produce a strategic "roadmap" of how to best close gaps in service and achieve community objectives.

Those who live and/or work in Yolo County are encouraged to assist in this effort by completing the short online survey and by encouraging family, friends and colleagues to do the same. The survey is important because, in addition to learning about the needs of Yolo County businesses and residents, it includes a "wireline" speed test that will gather important information about Internet speeds throughout Yolo County. This speed data, currently mapped by the California Public Utilities Commission, is based on Internet provider data, which can overstate actual speeds. Gathering accurate data of actual Internet speeds is a critical step in making Yolo County communities eligible for related state and federal grant funding.

Go to www.yolocounty.org and select the Yolo Broadband Survey link.

ANOTHER ATTACK MADE ON WASHINGTON AND ITS PEOPLE BY SACRAMENTO STAR

Many people feel squeamish over attacks made on certain localities by newspapers out of town or even by newspapers published in their own communities.

Newspapers have a definite purpose in life. They serve the communities in which they exist. Sometimes for betterment sometimes for detriment. But it is the purpose of every conscientious newspaper to do the best possible for the community in which it exists.

Patting children on the back may be a wise way of keeping them on the right track, but sometimes it becomes necessary to use the paddle or the old slipper on youngsters who fail to right themselves after having been cautioned.

The members of any community or composing any town or village are simply overgrown children. Among them are the wayward that need correction, among them are the straight forward and easily directed people.

It is no different in Washington to what it is in any other community.

Only yesterday the grand jury of Sacramento city and county issued an appeal to the citizens to, in the name of God, try to observe the provisions of the Volstead law.

From this it is evident that the grand jury of Sacramento county is fully aware that every provision of the Volstead law is being violated in Sacramento and so far as this paper is concerned, it is believed that such publication had far better be left unpublished.

Stirring up stink doesn't do any good at any time and endeavoring to correct the morals of the people against their wills has never proved to be a success.

These few preliminary remarks are passed simply as a prelude to an article that was published in the Sacramento Star on January 15, 1924.

In that article Irving Moore described conditions as he found them in Washington. He did not mince words but let the readers of the Independent judge for themselves in the article appended below.

But because Irving Moore said so is no indication that all he says is true any more than that all the Sacramento Bee says about Hiram Johnson is true.

Irving Moore has written far more caustic articles about the conditions prevailing in Sacramento than the conditions prevailing in Washington. Moore turns the inside out. He is a better detective than any Volstead law enforcement officer that ever existed and while he writes caustic stuff for today's issue of his paper he is looking for more caustic stuff for the next issue and if he does not secure it his job as a reporter isn't worth a snap of the fingers of his boss.

That is what he's paid for and while telling the truth may be painful to some people Moore gets paid for his work and is really of the impression that nobody pays much attention to his criticisms.

But here is the objectionable article:

(By Irving Moore)

If Sacramento grows as old and famous as Ujjain there'll never be foster child across the river.

For, I have heard folks admit sadly, careful to keep to his own side of the road.

Mrs. Ed. Peck has been confined to her home for several days of the past week with a severe spell of sickness. Yesterday she was somewhat improved.

The old ferry that has been in operation in Courtland during several years has been hauled up on the ways of the Sacramento Transportation Co. for repairs, which were badly needed. While under repairs the ferry that had previously been used at Isleton is doing service at Courtland, because there is no further necessity for a ferry at that point. It is understood that when the Courtland ferry is repaired it will be taken to Elkhorn to be used at that point. The ferry at that point is becoming too small and too old so that a larger boat is necessary.

Complaint has been made to Constable Buckingham by Frank Fenocchio that some petty thief had entered the headquarters of the Hart Construction Company in his neighborhood and stole 1,000 feet of two-inch iron pipe and also a large roll of garden hose and some other material. This material was used in the construction of the highway between the Catholic church in West Sacramento and Riverview. So far no trace of the burglars has been found.

Erlo Pankost spent the week-end in Washington visiting with friends from his home in Oakland.

Mrs. J. R. Williams has been confined to her home in Washington by illness.

Mrs. Ofa Conrad and Miss Clare Conrad, who have been confined to their home by illness, are now recovered.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. L. Lachuga was entered last Wednesday night and $20 in currency stolen.

Sacramento has her Broderick. Sacramento the beautiful, the decent, the proud, sitting complaisantly on one side of the river, must acknowledge parenthood of the rather shabby growth on the other side.

Broderick, camped on the other side, sneers a little at Sacramento 100, and yet, when times are hard, crosses the bridge for food and a job.

Take most any city that dwells respectably and quietly by a living stream and you'll find on the other side a disowned infant of sometimes mean proportions.

Hop heads and canned heat bums! They don't belong to Broderick. They're a Sacramento product and merely cross the river for recreation and undisturbed rest. You'll find them across the river by the dozens, but in every case they swear allegiance to Sacramento, except those temporarily without the pale on a "floater." But they're all coming back. As they will tell you, "Sack's a good stem to work. Yuh can getty there."

And there's another tribe that's not mentioned in chamber of commerce publicity. The auto load after auto load of Chinese that leave Sacramento between 9 and 11 o'clock every morning and cross the bridge to Broderick and lose themselves in one of several buildings that could be used, if it were the inmates' intent, for the purposes at matching pennies.

But the buildings and the intellectual atmosphere of Broderick are too restricted, so in the chilly hours of early morning the migration back across the bridge begins. And the buildings that could be used so nicely for flipping pennies settle down in fog and darkness.

Traveling in a different crowd are the dwellers of the uptown houses and the men who hammer away at the hulls of barges on the Broderick water front. Then there are fishermen, too. At one time a whole fishing fleet was operated out of Broderick. The fleet furnished Sacramento with Friday dinners.

There's still another crowd in Broderick, those who work in Sacramento mechanical shops. That was the first reason for the town. The S. P. shops on the Sacramento side were directly by the side of the bridges. Living in Broderick was handy for the shopmen. They could slide across the bridges in a couple of minutes every morning and thereby save for themselves a half hour more in bed. That accounted for most of the population at one time. It still accounts for many of the homes.

And there's another reason the town continues to carry on. Years ago, old timers tell me, the town was under water much of the time. People over there became so accustomed to the uncertainty of finding their barn on their own lot from one day to the next that they have ever since been hoping for a revival of the stirring days of floods and have been unable to settle down to peaceful pursuits in Sacramento.

PART OF FARRIS RANCH SOLD TO SACRAMENTO PURCHASER

Woodland, Jan. 30.—An order issued by Superior Judge Peter J. Shields at Sacramento yesterday was filed here today, confirming the sale by Mrs. George Adams of swamp land property belonging to the James Faris estate.

Arthur W. Elliott was the buyer and the price was $57,756.76.

Mrs. Adams became the administrator of the James Faris estate by reason of the death of Dr. Clinton Faris, former husband of Mrs. Adams and the so of James Faris.

WASHINGTON YOUTHS SEEM TO EMULATE SACRAMENTO BOYS

Late last Thursday, Joe Silveira and Louie Joseph, both sixteen years of age and both residents of Washington, decided they would go out into the world and make their own way through life.

Their reasons for so doing have not been explained nor can they really advance any motive or reason for this new departure except that they had read and heard about Sacramento kids who did that, too.

Their first escapade started in Sacramento, where they appropriated a Ford owned by a Japanese and working under a commercial license No. 5-868.

From Sacramento they went to Grass Valley, but decided that place was too slow. They returned and started out again on the southern route, arriving in Bakersfield on Sunday.

Here they appropriated another Ford and proceeded southward to the City of Angels, until a couple of deputy sheriffs in a high powered car overhauled them.

At the time they were arrested each one was driving a Ford and holding up a conversation in a megaphonic way by the use of the horn.

In Bakersfield the sheriff discovered they had come from Sacramento and immediately wired Sheriff Jones, Jones communicated with the parents of the boys, and Mr. Joseph proceeded southward by train to return them to Washington.

They spent three nights in the Bakersfield jail but are now content to remain in the hands of the juvenile court of Yolo County to be disposed of as soon as possible.

VOLUNTEER FIREBOYS SHOW APPRECIATION OF FRIENDSHIP

Last Friday at his home in Colonial Heights ex-postmaster J. S. Bennetts of Washington and his family were presented with a very handsome carving set by the members of the Washington Volunteer Fire department.

Committee had been named to select an appropriate gift for the Bennetts family and the selection was finally made so that not only would the ex-postmaster participate in its benefits but the entire family would be shown a measure of respect.

Presentation was made by Walter Leinberger, Dave Barry and Don Graff who really selected the set. Bennetts is extremely proud of this token of friendship and asks the Independent to say so for him.

GAS MAINS NEARLY COMPLETED AT SOUTH SIDE OF TOWN

The laying of gas mains to supply the people of Washington with fuel during the hot summer months is nearly completed in all the streets at the southern side of town, or south of Anno street.

Connections are being placed for some homes and all those who have signed for a supply are expected to signify their willingness for installation as soon as possible.

The Pacific Gas and Electric Company will furnish pipes into the lots for a distance of fifty feet, but if additional pipes will be necessary to reach the point of contact with stoves the property owners will be supposed to either supply it themselves or pay the corporation the cost of the extra connection.

In nearly every case the necessary connection can be made immediately with the extension from the mains so that those who are able to install stoves for cooking may have the work completed as long as the force of men and material are on the ground.

While many householders have had gasoline stoves during the summer season there are many housewives who will be glad to rid themselves of these dangerous cooking utensils, and it is believed that a reduction in insurance premiums can be secured as soon as the gas supply is installed and the gasoline stoves thrown out.

An extension of the mains to the northern portion of the town will be started as soon as the southern section is completed.
